Bring Your Purpose. Find Your Path.

Having served at Regis for over twenty-five years, I have seen our graduate programs grow by leaps and bounds—in size, in scope, and in value. Regis College has always been student-centered and, now, as the tenth president of the College, I see more great things ahead as that focus guides our development of future graduate offerings. We make our decisions “through the lens of the student” as well as the realities of knowledge and the globalized community when we determine what will benefit our students the most as part of their graduate school experience.

I am passionate about Regis College and I am passionate about graduate education. The students and the positive impact of our mission on them through dedicated faculty and staff truly energize me. While everyone talks about excellence, Regis has envisioned and implemented ways to achieve it, with gentleness, in the spirit of the Sisters of St. Joseph of Boston who founded the College. Their emphasis on truth, service, social justice and responsiveness to the needs of all has woven the fabric of this institution, and these are the themes that inform my work as President.

Antoinette M. Hays, PhD, RN
President

Regis College celebrates diversity and welcomes the world to our campus by fostering a commitment to global education opportunities. The enrollment and support of students from around the world, study abroad and exchange programs, an internationalized curriculum and hosting of visiting scholars all come together to enhance global perspectives by helping students, faculty and staff alike to gain exposure to and understand varying cultures in a context of community and world citizenship.

Nationally-Recognized Programs

Regis College’s School of Nursing, Science, and Health Professions is one of just 16 schools in America to be recognized as a Center of Excellence in Nursing Education by the National League for Nursing.

Pathways of Achievement

Pathways of Achievement are focused in our two schools, the School of Liberal Arts, Education and Social Sciences and the School of Nursing, Science and Health Professions. Regis College offers 14 graduate degrees, eight graduate certificate programs and one Doctoral program, a Doctor of Nursing Practice.

At Regis College, we are committed to serving the graduate international student population in their return to graduate school. Consistently student-centered, the Office works to facilitate the matriculation, advisement and admission of adult learners entering the College’s flexible, professionally-oriented graduate programs.

Whether you’re heading to the next level in your current career or exploring a new field, our graduate degree and certificate programs can help you reach your goals.

A Launching Pad for Your Career

At Regis, graduate students learn by doing. Graduate programs in Health Administration, Communication, Nursing, Education, and Regulatory and Clinical Research Management offer students the opportunity to complete a field experience or practicum in the related field to gain real world experience. Field experiences provide networking opportunities with industry professionals and the potential for securing a job after graduation. Field experiences frequently take place in and around the Boston area.

The result? Our graduates have secured jobs throughout Massachusetts and the United States, at organizations and educational institutions including Schwartz Communication, Lahey Clinic, the American Red Cross, Tufts University, Boston Medical Center, Joslin Diabetes Center, Boston Scientific and Genzyme.

I am very excited to pursue my Master’s degree at Regis College. I think the program is going to provide me with the tools needed to advance my professional and nursing career in the Boston area.

Globally Connected

Regis College is a student-centered community. We are infinitely proud of our diverse student body, and we continue to provide our students with the highest quality of support and education on all levels. Our Office of Graduate Affairs works to both ensure that international students are integrated into our community and that our domestic students are exposed to a multicultural presence on campus. In the process, all graduate students have access and opportunity to engage in a variety of global experiences throughout their study.

- Graduate Student International Potluck Dinner
  At the annual Graduate Student International Potluck Dinner, students are encouraged to bring a food dish that represents something about themselves: their homeland, hometown, heritage, or favorite flavor. The dinner provides an ideal opportunity for graduate students to meet one another outside of class and to share a bit about their cultural background.

- Peru Service Trip
  Graduate students have the opportunity to join a week long service trip to Peru over spring break. Throughout the week in Villa El Salvador, students, faculty and staff gain a sense of connection with Peruvian community and an exposure to another culture and country.

- Tournées French Film Festival
  For many years, Regis has hosted the Tournées French Film Festival, which represents the best of contemporary French cinema. Films span generational and geographic borders, offer a range of genres and subjects, and showcase innovations in both style and storytelling. 2012 festival films included The Artist, Potiche, 17 Filles, Romantiques Anonyme and Copie Conforme, directed by Persian director Abbas Kiarostami.

- Internationally-focused graduate courses
  - Theatre: From the Golden Age to the Present
  - Spanish Writers of the Nineteenth Century
  - Latin American Literature
  - Spanish Cinema
  - Spanish Literature from Twentieth Century to the Present
  - Latino/a Writers in the United States
  - Intercultural Communication in the Workplace

Best of Both Worlds

From the moment you turn into the long, tree-lined driveway, you sense that Regis College is a special place where you can experience the best of both worlds—the tradition of a small college environment with close access to big city life. Our beautiful, 132-acre campus in suburban Weston, Massachusetts is located only 12 miles from the center of Boston, one of the best social, cultural and sporting cities in America.

In addition, Regis prides itself on being a peaceful community, where many factors combine to provide a secure and safe campus environment for our students.

- Campus police are professionally trained and on patrol 24 hours a day.
- ID card access is necessary to enter all residence halls.
- An emergency blue light phone system allows quick reporting of serious incidents.
- Access to campus between 11pm-7am is restricted and limited to the main drive entrance.

CLINTON BUSH HAITI FUND BOOSTS REGIS COLLEGE HAITI PROJECT

The Clinton Bush Haiti Fund has announced a nearly half-million-dollar grant to Regis College to educate faculty at six Haitian nursing schools. The $463,000 grant was made to Regis’ Haiti Project to assist in providing 24 Haitian educators with master’s degrees in nursing. These nurses, in turn, will be able to pass that education along to 1,650 students each year. The program has a multiplier effect on Haiti by sustaining nursing jobs, promoting healthcare standards, and transforming the health sector, all while filling a need for skilled Haitian health workers.
