In order to facilitate the evaluation of a home-schooled applicant’s candidacy, the student must submit the following items, in addition to the admission requirements listed above. Home-schooled students must submit all syllabi, reading lists, and grading records. If the student is pursuing a specific independent study course, the student should submit all information on the requirements for this course. In addition, the student is required to submit the SAT Reasoning or ACT scores as well as three SAT II test scores. We will review the application carefully, and if more information is required, the student may be sent a request to come to campus for further testing.

To be eligible to attend Regis College, a student must be graduating from an accredited secondary school and have a college preparatory background. International students who do not speak English as their first language are expected to show their proficiency in English (a minimum of 79 (internet-based)/213 (computer-based)/550 (paper-based) is accepted on the TOEFL). Course credit evaluations are typically sent with the letter of acceptance, informing students of their anticipated entering class status. Nursing students should inquire about specific requirements. Please see the Application Checklist on page 1 for assistance with submitting a complete application.

Regis College recognizes the rigors of the International Baccalaureate program. Transcripts of students in such programs are evaluated on an individual basis by the Office of Academic Affairs to determine the number of college credits to be awarded. The credits for this evaluation include the student’s academic performance during the program and outcome as demonstrated by final grades.

The Admission Committee considers, but does not require a personal interview as a very important part of the admission process. To schedule an interview and tour, please contact the Office of Admission at:
