Regis College Library

Do you know how to use information ethically in your research? The ethical use of information avoids plagiarism and academic dishonesty through accurate quoting, paraphrasing, and citing the work of others. Paraphrasing and the ability to honestly and accurately attribute the work of others are essential skills.

For information on how to refine your academic integrity skills, please see our Academic Integrity & Academic Writing Resources guide.

If you have any questions, please feel free to reach out to the library! You can email us at reference@regiscollege.edu or schedule an appointment to meet with a librarian by using our Research Consultation Request form. Remember to check our website for our current availability!
